

ASSESSING BEEF CATTLE

What is Being said for and Against it

Under the old law relating to levying and collecting taxes, says the Winnemucca Silver State, the Board of County Commissioners did not levy taxes until April, and no loan for taxes attached to property prior to date. As the season for shipping beef cattle closed before the assessment was levied, no revenue was derived from that source, as the fat cattle were all out of the country, and while the fact was apparent that from 20,000 to 35,000 head were shipped from here annually, the Assessment roll showed that no beef cattle were assessed for purposes of taxation. Under the new law, which went into effect on March 1st, this year, Boards of County Commissioners are required to fix the rate of taxation on or before the first Monday of March in each year, at which time the loan for taxes attaches. Under this Act, several thousand head of beaver have been assessed in this county—here, at Lovelock, and Iron Point. It is claimed by some that this will have a tendency to prevent Oregon and Idaho cattlemen from driving their cattle here for shipment unless they can get them out of the State before the 1st of March. This is improbable, however, as every stock owner must admit that there is no injustice in assessing all property found in the country on which taxes have not been paid elsewhere. The value placed upon beef cattle by the Assessor for purposes of taxation is $25 per head. As the rate of taxation is $2.60 on the $100 valuation, the taxes on a fat steer amount to only 65 cents, which all things considered, is by no means enormous. If the cattle are shipped to California and not marketed before the first of March, they are subject to taxation there as well as here, and as a much higher valuation is placed on them in that State, the taxes will be fully as much as in Humboldt, even though the rate of taxation should be much less. There is no reason to fear that cattle men will try to avoid taxation by driving their cattle into California in the Fall, or by shipping them by rail earlier than usual, so long as they are treated as leniently by the Assessor as they have been this Spring. The low rate of 65 cents a head will not warrant any departure from the established custom.

Another Overland Route

A new route from St. Louis to San Francisco, via the St. Louis and San Francisco Railroad to Halstead, Kansas, the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe railroad to Albuquerque, New Mexico, the Atlantic and Pacific Railroad to the Needles, and the Colorado river, Arizona and the Southern Pacific to San Francisco, is expected to be in complete operation by May 1. This route will be 300 miles shorter than the present one via Deming, and promises to become very popular at all seasons of the year.

Protection Helps Canada

The Minister of Agriculture is authorized by the statement that 30,000 Canadians returned from the United States during the past year. Of these 20,000 were operatives employed in the factories of New England. This immigration he claims, is the result of the Government's protective policy.

Knights to go the Wrong Way

It is announced that Chicago Apollon Commandery, Knights Templar, will not attend the Triennial Conclave but instead 200 of the Commandery will charter a steamer and visit London, Paris and Berlin.

The returns are not all in yet, but when several back counties are heard from it is estimated that the damage to business resulting from Wiggins' prophecy will approximate the figures representing the money loss by the great Western floods. The Gloucester, Mass., fisheries are said to have suffered a loss of $100,000 to $150,000, by the delays of superstitious fishermen, who some weeks ago, resolved not to leave on fishing trips until after the 15th. A prominent shipping merchant of New York states that a loss of not less than $1,000,000 has resulted to the commerce of that city from the effect of Wiggins' "great storm" prognostication, and there is little doubt that other commercial cities on the seaboard have suffered proportionately.

The great East River bridge between New York and Brooklyn, which has been many years in building, is finally approaching completion and is expected to be open for travel within two months. It has already absorbed nearly four million and a half millions of dollars and is a companion monument to the new State Capitol at Albany.

A CARD FROM R. HOWARD.

RENO, March 22, 1883.

EDITORS JOURNAL:—I have a few words to say in reply to an article in the Evening Gazette, headed "A Defaulting Creditor." This whole trouble originated from the action of T. S. Merchant, who represents wholesale houses in San Francisco. I have been in the grocery business in Virginia City for about seven years, until about five months past. I dealt very extensively with his houses from the time I started business until I closed out. At the final wind up Merchant claimed that I was indebted to him or his houses five hundred and forty-two dollars, for which amount he brought suit against me here in Reno to recover two hundred and seventy-seven dollars for (as he claimed) services rendered. Feeling positive that I owed him no money for services I very naturally objected to paying that amount. I had some property in this (Washoe) county which he attached, and finding he could not make that win, he released the attachment on my property. He came to Virginia City and brought suit against me to recover the above amount. The case was brought before Justice Pomroy and after Merchant making so much fuss in the way of attaching, suing and talking, he got judgment against me for thirty-six dollars, an amount I did not dispute or object to paying him. That was some three months ago. I had not heard nor seen him until last evening, when I was on the train on my way to San Francisco. When the train arrived at Carson he called me to one side and asked me what I intended to do about that judgment he had standing against me. I told him that I was going to San Francisco, that I expected some money when I got there, and would pay him. He said that if I did not pay him there and then that he would telegraph to Reno and have me arrested. I told him that that would do him no good, that I had but little money with me and could not pay him until I got to San Francisco. He threatened to have my ticket taken from me. I told him that I would rather he would not put me to any trouble while in Reno, (this conversation was on the train) He said that he had telegraphed to Virginia City to his lawyer (Stephens) and that arrangements would be made for my arrest by the time the train arrived at Reno. I took him to one side in the car and said "Merchant I have paid you at least seventy-five thousand dollars for groceries (which assertion I can substantiate by referring to my books), and let us talk this little matter over mildly." He said "The only mildness there is about it is that you will be taken from the train at Reno and I am going down for that express purpose." He says "You are putting on lots of airs because you are with a girl that is worth lots of money and I will bust up your pleasure trip to San Francisco." I was not going on a pleasure trip to San Francisco but intended to remain there but a few days and then go on to Washington Territory. When we arrived at Reno it was but a few minutes until he had the constable on my track, together with himself. From his actions anyone would have thought that he (Merchant) was chief of some great police force and that they were trying to capture some murderer or train robber, and they were to get a heavy reward for their capture. They peered into every hole and corner looking for me, except the time that Merchant was in the car abusing a young lady in the most violent language on account of her being a friend, as he said, of mine, an act he must apologize for some future time. I was standing on the railroad and could see (but not hear) all the maneuvers of the chief and his force. I thought I would venture in the car where my companions were. The moment I stepped in the whole force made a grand rush for me, Merchant, leading or commanding the squad. I stepped out of the train and walked up the track a short distance and waited for the train to pull up. As it came along I made an attempt to mount the train when I was caught by an officer and pulled back with great force. He (the officer) asked me if I was the man that Merchant wanted. I said I did not know. He says you are and you cannot go on the train. At that time my ankle was fractured and I pleaded to him to get on the train and ride to the next station and I would come back with him, and pay his fare, that I had some friends on the train that I must see. He hung on to me, and almost stripping me of my overcoat, says "no you cannot go." By this time the train was out of reach. I asked him his name, and he told me his name was Nash; that he was the Constable. I asked him what authority he had to stop me, he said I would know when the right time came. He assisted me to the Depot Hotel and said he would go and get Merchant, he would also get the doctor. Dr. Waggoner came and dressed my ankle, but at this writing I have not seen or heard of the Constable or Merchant. Since they have been the means of my getting crippled they apparently seem quite satisfied to let the matter rest. As to my running and falling over a culvert as the "Gazette" says it is not so. Merchant and Nash will find out when and how the accident happened me, at the proper time; neither did I settle the bill as stated by the Gazette. They did not get a cent, and as to my being a defaulter the Gazette is making a large assertion a little too hasty. I have resided in this State for eight years and have had dealings with a great many, and I defy any one that I have had dealings with in this State to say that I have ever acted anything but honorably with them, or that I am indebted to them a dollar. I also defy Tom Merchant to deny my statement. R. HOWARD

Jefferson Davis will deliver the opening address at the meeting of the Southern Historical Society, in Nashville, May 2.

Beauties of Free Trade

[Carson Appeal]

There is at present a Frenchman in this city who contemplates opening an eating house in Hawthorne. He says that he is one of nearly ten thousand refugees from the iron regions of Wisconsin. The town of Marquette was kept up by the iron trade, but the removal of the duty reduced rails from $28 to $14 a ton. In consequence of this iron can no longer be mined at a profit, and ten thousand people are thrown out of employment. Congress, with its usual bullheadedness, while removing the duty from iron rails, still allows a protective tariff on blooms, the raw form of the iron from which the rails are made. If the tariff were taken off blooms iron men could purchase them cheaply and still make money manufacturing the rails. This little incident sustains the theory advanced by Senator Jones in his speech on the tariff question.

Served Them Right.

"Fishing with Giant Powder," is the heading given to a long article in the Modoc Independent, descriptive of an adventure which befell a party of men who went out on a raft on Goose Lake a year ago to kill trout, one of them being the Sheriff of the county, and all (as the Independent puts it) being, "generally speaking, law-abiding citizens of good reputation." Well, these respectable gentlemen went out on the lake and prepared a cartridge to be dropped to the bottom of the lake, there to be exploded and kill a raft-load of trout. But the fuse got caught in a click between the logs of the raft, and when the "fishermen" had got well off from the spot where the cartridge was supposed to be, it exploded and sent them twenty feet in the air. The Independent says they have all since sworn off, and hereafter will obey the law.

Held to Answer.

Elko county advertised for proposals to do certain work. There were two competitors for the job, and when the Board of Commissioners met, one of them took advantage of circumstances and opened the other's bid. The knowledge thus acquired enabled him to number his competitor. The fraud was detected, and the case of the State of Nevada vs. I. Ostreicher, in which defendant has been held in the sum of $500 to appear before the next Grand Jury, is the result thus far.

Conkling's Case.

The Coroner's inquest in the Conkling-Haverstick homicide was held Thursday, and the jury found that Conkling had killed Haverstick by firing a pistol shot, the same being fired under great provocation. Bail was refused, and Conkling was recommitted to the Tombs.

A writ of habeas corpus and certiorari was issued by the Supreme Court commanding Coroner Levy to appear and show cause why the accused should not be admitted to bail. Conkling's counsel claims that as the shooting was justifiable his client should be admitted to bail.

"YOUNG MRS. WINTHROP."

The Madison Square Company's Latest and Best.

The San Francisco Chronicle says "in Young Mrs. Winthrop the Madison Square Theater people have at last got a play. Hazel Kirke made a success on emotion that was unreasonable and illegitimate. Emeralds ran into the namby-pamby, which bade fair to pall on the public. Young Mrs. Winthrop discounts the first on its own ground of emotion, and, although the agony is strained to the last tear, the piece has a true dramatic ring. Bronson Howard has taken the oldest of themes and treated it anew, with a delicacy and purity that make the play stand out even against the finish and force of the French drama. From no subject save the seventh commandment apparently can the modern Frenchman draw emotional situations. An American has at last succeeded in placing before us a play of heart and innocent love and suffering that is entirely unobjectionable in its results, while it is more effective on the lachrymal glands than even the tearful Camille. Young Mrs. Winthrop is the work of a man whose knowledge of the springs of human nature is deep and whose appreciation of them is pure. There is not a line in the dialogue or a situation in the piece that is not in the finest vein of pure sentiment, and the characters are deliciously free from any suggestion of that prudency which the French drama has up till now made its main feature. It is as nearly constructed, as delicately finished and as powerfully written as any of Sardou's white it is to be questioned if the originality of some of the characters does not complete in Bronson Howard the qualities which have made the French writer the foremost dramatist. Not that it is, altogether beyond criticism, because there is a little stretching of the motif to carry the play over four acts.

The impression made by Young Mrs. Winthrop last night was marked. The audience, which will be larger every night, sat intently listening to and watching every part in the play, and in all the acts, but more especially in the second and last, handkerchiefs were held to eyes of both men and women all over the house. The death of the child, or its effect, rather, was almost painful and no characters seen on the stage for a long time have attracted such genuine or deep interest. The comedy is good, bright and not overdone. The acting of the play showed few weak spots. In the first act everybody was a little slow, but as the play evidently grew on the audience, the actors became more at their ease, and the last two acts were gone through admirably. Miss Carrie Turner came on from New York specially for 'Constance.' A tall, lithe figure, a pretty and pleasant face, a nicely poised head, and a graceful carriage pleased the audience, and although she is a trifle given to the statuesque and stiff, after the lighter portions of the first act she showed a strong, sympathetic nature and a great command of the quiet methods which became the character. Miss Turner will be a favorite. Mr. Buckley did in the last three acts as fine and effective acting as has been seen here for some time, and outshone his previous efforts in parts where weakness was rather expected. Sydney Cowell played 'Mrs. Dick' with a suppression of herself which made it a trifle tame. She can, and undoubtedly will, play it much better. In 'Ruth' Mrs. Whiffen was at home. It is a delightful character and the lady played it most admirably, especially the scenes with 'Douglas' in the second act. Mr. Whiffen was equally good as the old lawyer, and made himself the favorite of the audience, as he always does. The prettiest part in the piece was entrusted to Enid Leslie, a little lady who might have been born for it. 'Edith' is the blind girl, whom everybody loves, and the nature, made all the brighter by the fact that its light comes entirely from within, seemed to be the property of the actress. Bright, pure, sympathetic, full of a charming innocence, that blind figure, for once free from any suggestion of suffering, was a most attractive feature of the play. The acting was a little immature, but in that particular it did not show any glaring fault, and Miss Leslie has at least shown adaptability, if not unusual talent. Mr. Rich was capital as 'Herbert,' although he overdid it a little. Mr. Ross played 'Dr. Melbank' admirably. Miss Della Owen was the maid. Young Mrs. Winthrop should do the largest business of the season, if American dramatists are to be encouraged. The scenes, interiors, were entirely novel and excessively handsome."

Rice Surprise Party.

This popular theatrical organization will appear at the theatre on the 28th instant, in their great comedy success entitled "Pop." The San Francisco Report says of the play and company: Pop, the present Bush Street attraction, suggests champagne, and it is as sparkling as bright as light as that delectable beverage. The music is catching. The dialogue is lively, the situations are good and new, and the business original and funny. Mackay is the best comedian of the burlesque genre who has visited California; Fortescue is as heavy and laughable as ever, and the girls formed the prettiest, neatest and happiest coterie of stage femininity seen in San Francisco for several years.

The jury in the case of Mrs. Neenan against the Savage Mining Company, just concluded in the United States Circuit Court, were unable to agree upon a verdict. It is said that the jury in the beginning of their deliberations stood six each for the plaintiff and defendant, but that subsequently there were nine in favor of giving the plaintiff damages.

Senator Jones and Congressman Cassidy will return to Nevada about the 10th of April.
